PREFACE

The Madras Government Museum has a valuable collection of coins representing the Various dynasties which ruled different parts of India at different times. The Vijayanagar Empire is among these well represented by a fairly good collection of its coinage. It was at the suggestion of Mr. Mohandas, Retired Assistant Director of Museums, who was a numismatist himself that I took up the preparation of the catalogue of the Vijayanagar Coins in the collection of this Museum.

In the preparation of this catalogue, I found the "Catalogue of Vijayanagar Coins in the Andhra Pradesh Government Museum", by Thiru N. Ramesan of immense use for reference purpose. The preparation of this catalogue was made possible by the encouragement given by DT. S.T. Satyamurti, Director of Museums, and I am grateful to him for it. I thank my colleagues. Thiru N. Harinarayana and Thiru S. Thangavelu who have helped me in weighing the coins.

HISTORICAL I.

VIJAYANAGAR

With the establishment of the Sultanate of Delhi towards the closing period of the twelfth century, the Muslim Power was firmly entrenched in the North and for a hundred years thereafter, they concentrated their attention to North India. The idea of subjugating the South began with the Khiljis.

Garshap Malik, the future Allaud-din, sought the permission of Sultan Jalal-ud-din to lead an expedition against Malwa. He went further south and attacked the Yadava Kingdom of Devagiri. The reigning king Rama Deva surrendered and agreed for peace. Alla-ud-din's campaign was more for plunder rather than extension of his territories. In 1303-1304, Malik Fakhur-ud-din (later Mohammed-bin-Tughlaq) led an army against Warrangal. The Telugu army inflicted heavy loss and defeated him. Again in 1309 Malik Kafur was sent against Warrangal to avenge the defeat sustained by the Imperial army on the earlier occasion. Prataparudra sustained defeat and was forced to open negotiations with the invader. Early next year, Malik Kafur went on another expedition to the South, Dora-samudram, Hoysala and the Pandyan kingdoms.

The political revolution in Delhi put an end to the Khilji rule and ushered in that of the Tughlaq rule. Ghiyas-ud-din Tughlaq decided to extend the sway of Islam upto Cape Comarin. In 1321, he sent an army against Warrangal led by his son Ulugh Khan. The expedition was not a success. Having been satisfied in repulsing the invader, Prataparudra, thought he had secured peace from further attack from Delhi. Ghiyasuddin sent large reinforcement to Devagiri and Ulugh led a second expedition against the Kakatiya kingdom. This time Prataparudra sustained defeat and had to negotiate peace. Ulugh Khan sent an expedition to Ma'bar, the country was conquered for a time and brought under the sway of Delhi. At the time of the accession of Mohammed-bin Tughlaq, considerable portions of the South acknowledged the sovereignty of Delhi. The movement for freeing the Deccan from the Muslims may be said to have begun immediately after the Sultan left for Northern India in 1329. The people had never accepted Muslim rule willingly. The revival of Saivism and religious policy of the Sultan and his provincial governors were some of the factors which kindled the liberation movement. Prominent among its leaders were Prolaya Nayaka and his cousin Kapaya Nayaka.

Harihara and Bukka were the sons of Sangama. They were in the employment of Prataparudra II. When the kingdom fell to the Muslims in 1323, they went over to Kampili. When Kampili also fell in 1327, they were taken prisoners to Delhi, where they embraced Islam and became favourites of the Sultan. They were sent to Kampili by the Sultan to deal with the revolt of the Hindus and take over the administration from Malik Mohammed. It is believed that both of them renounced Islam and gave up the cause of Delhi and prepared to set up a Hindu kingdom, which in course of time emerged as the Great Vijayanagar Empire. There are conflicting versions of Muslim historians and Hindu traditions as to what had happened when the brothers arrived in the South, after being deputed by the Sultan.

It is believed that the general anti-Islamic movement during that time had an effect on Harihara and Bukka. The meeting with Vidyaranya (forest of learning) further rekindled the two brothers to serve the cause of their ancestral religion. As K.A.N. Sastri puts it, needed a spiritual leader of the eminence of Vidyaranya to receive back Harihara and Bukka to the Hindu fold.

The two Sangama brothers founded a city on the southern bank of Tungabhadra and gave the name Vijayanagara (city of Victory) or Vidyanagara (the city of learning), the latter name, probably in honour of Vidyaranya. Harihara I celebrated his coronation on 18th April 1336, in the typical Hindu manner.

In the year 1347, was founded the Muslim Sultanate of the Deccan which posed an immediate threat to the Hindu culture of the South. From the beginning, Vijayanagar kingdom had to fight wars with Bahmani kingdom.

HARIHARA I

Harihara I was the founder of Vijayanagar Empire. He celebrated his coronation in the presence of God Virupaksha on 18th April 1336. He acted as the agent of God Virupaksha. The year 1357, must have been the last year of his reign, as that is the last date when his known inscriptions occur. Harihara I nominated his ablest brother, Bukka I as his successor. Bukka's rule lasted for nearly twenty years (1357-1377). The most important event of Bukka's reign was the overthrow of the Madura Sultanate by his son Kumara Kampana.

Bukka I was succeeded by his son Harihara II who ruled for twenty-seven years (1377-1404). The great Sayana-charya, the brother of Madhava was his Chief Minister. Prince Bukka II son of Harihara II, led two expeditions into Warrangal territory, but nothing significant was achieved. Another achievement during his rule was the expansion of the territory and Krishna became the northern frontier for a time. A fierce battle was fought between the Vijayanagar and the Bahmani kingdoms. Harihara II agreed to an armistice, after paying heavy ransom. After the death of Harihara II in 1404, there was a war of succession and finally Devaraya I became the king and had his coronation on 5th November 1406. Before the accession of Devaraya I, two kings held the throne for a brief period, first Virupaksha who in turn was ousted by Bukka II. Bukka II ruled for two years (1405-1406).

Bukka II and Devaraya I carried out the work of extending the city of Vijayanagar, raising fresh walls and towers and improving the fortification as per Portuguese chronicler Nuniz. According to Sewell, their great work was the construction of a huge dam across the Tungabhadra river. Devaraya was at war with Firoz Shah Bahmani. In the beginning, the war went against Firoz, but ended in peace on terms humiliating to the Hindu king who had to surrender the strategic fort of Bankapur and gave one of his daughters in marriage to the Sultan. But another war fought against the Bahmanis went in favour of Devaraya. Devaraya was succeeded by Vira Vijayaraya. According to Nuniz, Vijaya Raya, did nothing worth recording. The Bahmani king Ahmad Shah started a war against Vira Vijaya Raya and inflicted a defeat on the Vijayanagar king. The victory was accompanied by destruction of temples and colleges of Brahmins. Vira Vijaya Raya had to pay large amount as arrears of tribute.

Vijaya Raya was succeeded by his son Deva Raya II around 1426.

Devaraya II's reign was generally prosperous and during his reign, the Vijayanagar Empire made considerable progress. By 1428, Devaraya annexed Kondavidu and added it to the Vijayanagar Empire. This was followed by the invasion of the Kingdom of Orissa under Gajapati. Devaraya made considerable gains in Kerala, by conquering, defeating the ruler of Quilon and other chieftains. Abdul Razzak visited South India during this period. He states that though the Zamorin was not under the control of the Vijayanagar sovereign, he was afraid of the Vijayanagar monarch. He also states that Devaraya had supremacy over entire South India. According to Nuniz, Devaraya extracted tribute from the rulers of Ceylon, Quilon etc.

However, Devaraya's relations with the Bahmani kingdom was not happy and the traditional hostility continued.

Devaraya's long reign came to an end with his death in 1446. He was succeeded by Vijayaraya II and then by his own son Mallikarjuna, some time before 1447.

Mallikarjuna was a weak and incompetent ruler and from the period of his accession the kingdom witnessed a period of dissension and decline. Mallikarjuna left behind his infant son Rajasekhara, but the throne was seized by his cousin Virupaksha II.

According to Nuniz, Virupaksha II became a slave of vices, caring more for women, than anything, with the result that the authority of the Central Government continued to decline and total annihilation was prevented by the provincial Government. Most prominent among them was saluva Narasimha, the ruler of Chandragiri. Virupaksha II's rule continued till 1485, when he was murdered by his eldest son. The parricide declined the throne and he had his younger brother Prandadevaraya crowned king. The new king had his brothers assassinated to whom he owed his throne. He took to debauchery and neglected the affairs of the State. The only alternative left for Saluva Narasimha for saving the kingdom was to put an end to the old dynasty. Saluva Narasimha, therefore ordered his General Narasa Nayaka to proceed against Vijayanagar and capture the city. Saluva Narasimha became king about 1486. Much of the time and energy was spent in fighting and subduing warring chieftains. Saluva Narasimha died in 1491 and left behind two sons whom he commanded to the care of Narasa Nayaka. He was succeeded by Immadi Narasimha. After the death of Narasa Nayaka, his place was taken by Immadi Narasa Nayaka, better known as Vira Narasimha. The lawful king Immadi Narasimha was kept as under tutelage, finally assassinated in 1505 and was succeeded by Vira Narasimha who thus put the Tuluva dynasty on the Vijayanagar throne. Vira Narasimha was succeeded by the illustrious king of the Vijayanagar dynasty, Sri Krishnadevaraya.

The reign of Krishnadeva Raya was a glorious chapter in the history of the Vijayanagar Empire. Poets who saw Krishnadevaraya has given a graphic description of the king in the following words. "The king is of medium height and of fair complexion and good figure, rather fat than thin; he has on his face the signs of small pox. He is the most feared and perfect king that could possibly be, cheerful of disposition and very merry; he is one that seeks to honour foreigners and receives them kindly, asking about all their affairs whatever their conditions may be. He is a great ruler and is a man of much justice, but subjects to sudden fits of rage".

When Krishnadevaraya has taken over the reigns of the Vijayanagar Empire, the condition of the Empire was not very happy and steady. He had to encounter the troubles from rebel chieftains of ummatur, the Gajapatis of Orissa, the Muslim pressure from the north, particularly, Bijapur. In addition to all these local pressures, there was the rising power of the Portuguese which was establishing control over the routes and the maritime trade of the West Coast. Krishnadeva Raya handled the situation tactfully. His first task was to repulse the Bahmani forces which invaded his territory in pursuit of the policy of annual jihad. The Muslims started their raid into the Raya's kingdom in 1509, but to their surprise, they realised that it was not so easy task in the present situation. The progress of the Muslim army was checked at the town of the Diwani and they were defeated in the battle. The citadel of Kovilkonda was taken by Krishnadeva Raya. At the time of this war, the Portuguese Governor Albuquerque offered support in return for Vijayanagar's support for Portuguese against the Zamorin of Calicut; he also promised Arab and Persian horses exclusively to the Vijayanagar Empire. During Krishnadeva Raya's reign, the Vijayanagar empire was at its zenith.

Krishnadeva Raya's military campaigns were brilliant. He invaded Raichur doab and took Raichur fort. After the capture of Raichur, he marched on Gulbarga and took the city from where he marched on Bidar. Krishnadeva Raya undertook an expedition against the rebel chieftain of Ummatur, captured Penukonda and followed up with attacks on Ummatur and Sivasamudram.

Krishnadeva Raya opened the third front against the Orissa ruler who had under his control the coastal district in the east. He sent an army to lay siege to Udayagiri in 1513 and he himself conducted the operation. The siege lasted a year and a half and the fort was taken. On his way back to the capital, Krishnadeva Raya with his queens Tirumala Devi and Chinna Devi paid a visit to have a darshan of Lord Venkateswara. Next he directed his operation against Kondavidu and took the fort from Gajapathi after many months. A strong force was sent for capturing Kondapalli. The army sent by Prataparudra met the Vijayanagar forces on the banks of Krishna and he was thoroughly defeated. This campaign effectively completed Raya's conquest of Telengana. Krishnadevaraya next turned his attention to the country of Kalinga. Rajamahendravaram was one of the first cities taken. He continued his campaign till he reached its capital Cuttack. During Krishnadeva Raya's reign the glory of the Vijayanagar Empire was as its zenith.

Krishnadeva Raya distinguished himself not only as a great warrior, but as a great statesman and administrator. He was a great patron of arts and literature. The grandeur of his court received tributes from foreign visitors.

Krishnadeva Raya was succeeded by Achyuta Raya. On the whole Achyuta Raya's reign was spent in a struggle against adverse situation, marked by internal revolts, foreign aggression, intrigues and ambitions of Rama Raya. The neighbouring kingdoms which suffered defeats under Krishnadeva Raya, felt a sigh of relief after his death. Ismail Adil Khan once again invaded Raichur doab and seized Raichur and Mudgal before Achyuta Raya could save it. The attempts of Gajapathi ruler, the Sultan of Golconda, Quli Qutb Shah's bid to seize Kondavidu were filed. Achyuta Raya agreed to share the power with Rama Raya who was always causing trouble to him. Much of Achyuta Raya's time was spent facing internal troubles and external aggressions. Achyuta was succeeded by his son Venkata I. As Venkata I was not yet of age his maternal uncle Salavaraju Tirumala became regent. Varadadevi, the queen had no confidence in her brother. So she sought the help of Adil Khan. But by that time Tirumala bought of the Sultan. As a counter move, Rama Raya set at liberty. Sadasiva Raya from prison at Gutti and proclaimed him emperor. Though Sadasiva Raya was the king, the real power was vested with Rama Raya.

Rama Raya was a shrewd politician and he tried to set one against the other and thereby weaken their power. The Muslim kings of Deccan who realized this, joined together in order to have a united front against the growing power of Vijayanagar Empire. The Sultan of Ahmadnagar was responsible to bring about this alliance between the Muslim kings. Rama Raya who had come to know of the Muslim confederacy summoned all his people to help him. Adil Shah demanded Raichur, Mudgal, etc., and Rama Raya naturally refused the Sultan's demand and expelled the Muslim Ambassador from his Court.

All this resulted in a battle between the Muslim kings of the Deccan and the Vijayanagar which had a tremendous impact on the history of South India. The great Vijayanagar Empire which acted as a bulwark for two centuries against the Muslims was shattered. The battle was started on January 5, 1565 A.D. at a place called Raksa Tagdi. Rama Raya was caught and was brought to Nizam Shah, who cut off his head and showed it to all troops on the point of a lance. The Hindus when they saw their leader got killed, lost their morale and in addition to this two Muslims Generals who were serving under Rama Raya deserted their positions at that crucial moment. After the defeat, the Muslim armies who were bent upon destroying the Vijayanagar Empire, occupied the great city started destroying it systematically by loot, plunder and desecration.

Though the battle Raksas Tagdi or Tallikota worked havoc and appeared to be disastrous for the Vijayanagar empire, it did not mean the extinction of noble empire. The Vijayanagar empire continued to exist for a century or more there afterwards. In 1568 A.D. Sadasiva Raya undertook a tour of the Southern parts of the empire and received respects from the feudatories. It is seen from the epigraphic evidence that Sadasiva Raya died round about 1570 A.D. His name occurs in inscription till 1576.

After Rama Raya was taken prisoner and killed by his captor, Nizam Shah, the capital fell into the hands of the invading army. Tirumala made good his escape. The city was systematically plundered. The noble city never recovered from the blow and Tirumala's attempt to revive the glory of the city appear to have been unsuccessful. Tirumala had himself crowned emperor in 1570. After Tirumala, Sriranga I began to rule the Kingdom Sriranga began to rule from 1572, though his father continued to live in retirement. He continued the work of restoration, but there were many impediments. He could not make any spectacular success in establishing the Kingdom on firm footing due to division of the empire. Further the dissension among the nobles weakened the empire. When Sriranga died in 1585, leaving behinds no issue, he was succeeded by his brother Venkata.

After ascending the throne, the first task of Venkata was his attempt to recover the territory lost to Golconda. In Golconda, Mohamed Quli Qutb Shah succeeded Ibrahim in 1580. Venkata stirred up trouble against him in the Kondavidu territory Quli replied by seizing the whole of Kurnool and parts of the Cuddapah and Anantapur districts and marching towards Punukonda itself. Venkata continued his attacks on the Sultan of Golconda. Venkata tried to restore the prosperity of the villages in the northern districts which has suffered from renewed muslim onslaughts. He died in the year 1614. He nominated Sriranga, his nephew as his Successor. Venkata II had several wives but he had no son. One of his favourite queens borrowed a baby from one of her maids and called him her own and that created some problems. Sriranga was harsh and he alienated the sympathies of his nobles. The nobles fell into two camps one supporting the claim of Sriranga and the other supporting the so called son of Venkata's favourite queen. Venkata's favourite queen's brother Jagga Raya took up the cause of his sister's so called son. Velugotiyachama supported Sriranga. Jagga Raya seized and threw Sriranga and all the members of his family into prison. Yachama hatched a plan to liberate Sriranga. Some how Yachama's plan leaked to Jagga Raya who had Sriranga and his whole family killed.

The wanton destruction of the royal family created horror in the whole kingdom and Jagga Raya and his henchmen came to be hated. Ramadeva, the sole survivor of the family had the sympathy and Yachman after defeating Jagga Raya declared Ramadeva as emperor.

Ramadeva nominated his cousin Peda Venkata, a great grandson of Rama Raya to succeed to the throne. But Timma Raya, a paternal uncle of Rama thought his claim for the throne was more justified. Timma Raya seized the Government from Venkata III. But Timma Raya was looked upon as an usurper. Prince Sriranga, son of Chinna Venkata younger brother of Venkata III took up the cause of his uncle, beat Timma and made him accept Venkata's claim to the throne. Sriranga who championed the cause of Venkata II plotted against Venkata III. The Sultan of Golconda who was watching the disunity and the course of events sent an army in April 1642, to annex as much territory as possible from the Hindu Empire, which was in the last stages of dissolution. Venkata himself retired to the jungles and he died on 10th October 1641.

Venkata III had no children and he was succeeded by Sriranga III. Sriranga III made himself the King on the 29th October 1642. He himself had to face nobles who were against him. He had to fight against the muslim and he faced defeat after defeat at the hands of the muslims. He died in 1672. That was end of the Aravidu dynasty.

VIJAYANAGAR EMPIRE AND ITS POLICY ON RELIGION

At the beginning of the fourteenth century, India south of the Vindhyas, consisted of four powerful kingdoms fighting with each other and they were the Yadavas of Devagiri, the Kakatiyas of Warangal the Hoysalas of Dwarasamudram and the Pandyas of the extreme South. It was at this juncture that the Sultans of Delhi began to meddle in the affairs of the South Indian Kingdoms and ultimately to subjugate them. The Muslim occupation of South India was a period of tyranny and Ibn Batuta writes that Ghiyas ud-din was "a fiend in human shape". The Hindu temples were the targets of muslim attacks. Thus the Mohamadan occupation of South India and their act of tyranny had created the necessity of unity among the Hindus and a united action to stem the tide of Muhamadan aggression. It was in these circumstances that the Vijayanagar Empire was born and it played an important part in defending the Hindu faith in the south.

The religious policy of the Vijayanagar empire had considerable impact on their coinage and it is in their coins that we come across for the first time in the south iconographic representations of deities. As said earlier, the foremost aim of the Vijayanagar empire was to preserve the Hindu religion and dharma from the onslaughts of Islam and this is amply reflected on their coins.

The early kings of the Vijayanagar empire, were Saivas, but the later sovereigns became staunch Vaishnavas with a predilection for Lord Venkateswara of Tirupathi in preference to Sri Virupaksha of Vijayanagar. The members of the early Sangama dynasty were Saivas following the Kashmir school of Saivism and were known by the name of the Pasupathy (I). The members of the Tuluva dynasty, Krishnadeva Raya Achyuta Raya and Sadasiva Raya patronised Vaishnavism. Though Krishnadeva Raya was a staunch Vaishnava, he showed equal patronage to Siva temples also. When Krishnadeva Raya went to Tirupathi, in A.D. 1514, he bathed the God, Lord Venkatesa in gold with 30,000 gold pieces (II) Achyuta Raya was an ardent follower of Sri Vaishnavism. It is seen from his generous gifts to temples and institutions both Saivite and Vaishnavite that he showed equal patronage to both sects, in the first half, but in the later period his learnings were more pronounced towards Vaishnavism. Sri Vaishnavism received greater patronage from the kings of the Aravidu dynasty. Tirumala I made the Tulabhara and other gifts at Kanchi, Srirangam, Seshachala (Tirupati), Kanakasabha (Chidambaram) and Ahobhaladri. Sri Ranga was also a staunch Vaishnava.

VIJAYANAGAR COINAGE AS GLEANED FROM INSCRIPTIONS AND FOREIGN TRAVELLERS, ACCOUNTS.

Inscriptions and foreign travelers' accounts are invaluable sources for the study of Vijayanagar coinage. There are a number of references to names of coins such as Panam, Gadyana; Varaha, Pons, etc., in the Vijayanagar inscriptions. Besides these inscriptions, the accounts left by the foreign chroniclers like Paes, Nuniz, Barboza, Abdur Razzak, Farishta to mention a few are very helpful to have a glimpse of the monetary system which was in vogue in the Vijayanagar Empire during the period. The names of those coins occur in inscriptions referring to the taxes. It may be sufficient to cite the examples of a few inscription of the Vijayanagar period which make mention of the name of coins.

An inscription refers to a tax on atums of land as 8 varahas. (1) There are innumerable references to Panam in the Vijayanagar inscriptions. References to professional taxes are found in the inscriptions. Details of levy of tax are clearly given; for instance, the rate of tax for each goldsmith, blacksmith or carpenter was 5 panams, each chief potter 5 panam, each chief washerman 5 panam. (2) Devaraya II gave an order to Srigririnatha of Chandragiri giving him permission to remit the jodi of 13 pons (varahans) at 61/4 panams or 1,316 1/4 panams at 10 panam per pon so that the amount might be used for the temple of the Porerriperumal (1).

An inscription in Mulbagal taluk registers that Mulurayi Hariyappa has given to a merchant by name Sankappasethi, a Sasana remitting the fixed rent of 2 hana on condition that he presented every day 2 belte leaves to the temple at Mulugayi (2)

Apart from the inscription, the different names of the coins which probably constituted different denominations and of different metals are found mentioned in their accounts. Paes who was in Vijayanagar empire in 1520 informs us that Krishnadevaraya put in his treasury every year ten million pardaoe after meeting his own expenses and the expenses of his 12,000 wives (3). According Varthema, "This king of Narasinga is the king I have ever seen". He also says that "His Brahmins, that is his priests say that he possess a revenue of 12,000 pardaoe per day" (4.)

COINAGE IN VIJAYANAGAR EMPIRE

One of the remarkable contributions of the Vijayanagar Empire was the great improvement in the currency system in South India. "The matrix was adopted to the exclusion of the punch. A uniform weight standard of the pagoda was introduced, the shape and metallic values of the different coins were fixed and the coinage in general was sub-divided into several denominations (5).

Panchamukhi in his article on Vijayagar writes, "From the Parasara Madaviya, a copious commentary written by Madhava on the text of parasara Smrithi, it may be gathered that Harihara issued an order that the taxes should be remitted in money instead of kind. This led to the coming of several fraction to suit the requirements of administration(6); "Among the administrative reforms of Madhava, the prime minister under Harihara II", writes Panchamukhi, "introduction of the nagari alphabet in the public records and on the legends of the coins (Elliot CSI 0.95)" (6), It is observed that nagari was used extensively though the language was Kannada. The numerous symbols found on the coins afford rich material for the study of the religious persuasion of the sovereign.

The dynasticwise as well as sovereignwise analysis would show that the Vijayanagar kings have gradually become votaries of vaishnavism. The founders of the Vijayanagar kingdom Harihara I and Bukka I adopted the Hanuman device on their coins. By the time Harihara II occupied the throne of the Vijayanagar Empire, it was well established and Harihara II issued coins with a variety of symbols such as a Bull, Saraswati-Brahma and Umamaheswara. The later rulers of the Sangama dynasty introduced the elephant device on their coins. The new device, namely, the elephant issued by the later rulers does not seem to have any significance, political or religious. This device was introduced by Devaraya II and it is explained by the king being an adept in elephant hunting and his assuming the title Gajabintekara (1).

The coins of Devaraya II, especially the copper issues contain the representation of the scene of the king fighting the elephant and ultimately subduing the animal (M.A.R.) (2).

It is not possible to say with certainty about the coinage of the Saluva kings.

The coins of the Tuluva kings exist in considerable quantity. The Most powerful king of the Tuluva dynasty was Krishnadeva Raya and his coins in gold and copper are well represented in the Government Museum, Madras.

The Andhra Pradesh Government Museum have a good collection of Vijayanagar coins.

The coins of Krishnadeva Raya can be classified on the basis of their devices under the following types :-

- 1) Venkatesa
- 2) Siva and Parvati
- 3) Balakrishna
- 4) Bull
- 5) Garuda

It is evident from the device found on the coins of Krishna deva Raya that he was under the influence of Vaishnavism. But he continued the Siva Parvati type, which according to panchamukhi was out of regard for the family deity (2). Achyutha Raya issued coins with the device of Gandaberunda both in copper and gold. Though Sadasiva, the very name implies that he had leanings towards Saivism, revived the Garuda and Lakshmi Narayana types.

The sovereigns of Aravidu dynasty were staunch Vaishnavites as is evident from their family deity Lord Venkatesa of the Tirumalai hills (3) Their devices on the coins also may be cited as evidenc. of their strong leaning towards Vaishnavism.

The following are the types of coins of the Araviduldynasty:-

Tirumala Raya	[1) Sri Rama
		2) Conch and discus
		3) Garuda
		4) Boar
		5) Elephant
		6) Bull

The study of the reverse of a coin is as important as the obverse. The legend on a coin is particularly useful for it can throw some light on the name of the king who issued the coin, the language employed for, the legend and also for studying the palaeology. It is interesting to note that the founders of the Vijayanagar kingdom Harihara I and Bukka I have employed Kannada script for their legend on coins. The adoption of the Kannada language for their legend and the emblem of Hanūman and Garuda by the founders of Vijayanagar points to the fact that the family had greater affinities with the Kannada language and Karnataka where the Kadambas with the Hanuman flag and the Yadavas with the Garuda ensign had held away over two centuries. (1) Gradually Nagari was substituted for Kannada in coins during and after the reign of Harihara II.

There was alround improvement in the coinage in the Vijayanagar period. Coins were issued in gold, copper and silver, through silver coins are not procurable. The Government Museum, Madras has not any silver coin belonging to the Vijayanagar empire in its collection.

Inscription on stone, copper plate grants and the accounts of the foreign chroniclers who visited the Vijayanagar Empire in the contemporary period are the main sources of information on Vijayanagar coinage. During the Vijayanagar period the coinage was divided into several denominations, both in gold and copper. The following are the principal coins in gold and copper as glanced from the literary sources (including inscriptions)

(1) Panchamukhi. Vijayanagar Centuary Volume.

Abdur Razak reports the following coinage which according to him was in existence during the time of Devaraya II.

Gold -

- 1) Varaha
- 2) Partab 1/2 Varaha.
- 3) Fanam 1/10 Partab.

Silver -

Tar -1/6 Fanam

Copper -

1/3 Tar.

The next point which deserves consideration is the weight standard of the different coins like, Gadyana, Pagoda, Varaha, Kasu, Jitel etc., and how they are related to each other. Even this information is gleaned from the literary sources and particularly the accounts left by the foreign travellers who visited the kingdom during that time.

Gadyana, Varaha or Pagoda denote the same coin; weighing about fifty to fiftytwo grains in the Vijayanagar period.¹ The term Gadyana appears in the inscriptions of Northern India also.² According to Yagnavalkya, the Gadyana is a weight equal to 32 gunjas or 62 grains approximately. Gradually it began to be used in the sence of a coin weighing about 60-65 grains which during the Vijayanagar times was standardised to 50 to 52 grains. The figures of Varaha and Durga also figured on some of the coins. The coin was known as Varaha and we get some information about it from the accounts of foreign chroniclers who visited the empire. According to Barbosa, Pardao was coined in certain cities of the kingdom of Narsinga and it was round in shape and made in a mould.

Three types of Varahas are known to have been in existence and they were Ghattivaraha,³ Doddavaraha⁴ and Suddhavaraha. The last mentioned appears to have been the same as ordinary Varaha of weight of about 52 grains. The doddavaraha was twice in value as well as in weight of a Gadyana or Varaha. In Elliotts "Coins of South India", was published the figure of a coin weighing 119.7 grains issued by Sri Krishnadeva Raya⁵ Mention is also made of Cakra gadyana, Cakra Varaha and Kati gadyana in an inscription.⁶ According to Abdul Razak, a gadyana, was equal to ten Pons⁷. Whereas according to Varthema it was equal to twenty Pons. From this we may presume that the gadyana to which Varthema referred to was doddavaraha. Barbosa⁸ writes that the Pardao (Pagoda) was equal to three hundred and twenty reis whereas Paes is of the opinion that it was equal to three hundred and sixty reis⁹.

Pratapa was another coin which was current during the Vijayanagar period. The Pratapa or Partab was possibly half-a-gadyana. It appears that Kati was also a gold coin and was one-fourth of a varaha an an epigraph of A.D. 1463 states that four Katis was equal to one varaha².

The only silver coin of which any reference is traceable was the tar. Abdul Razak says that the tar was one-sixth of panam².

The copper coins of the Vijayanagar period occur in considerable quantity. Abdul Razak mentions only one coin and that is jital. Besides that, other copper coins which were believed to have been existence were Pana and Kasu; but nothing is definitely known about its value.

It was stated earlier that during the Vijayanagar period the currency system in South India was well organised. This fact is amply borne by the fact that the coins were issued in gold and copper, the weight was standardised and the coins were divided into, several denominations. It is further corroborated by the fact that the Vijayanagar coins. Both gold and copper, especially the gold coins have regular shape, uniform weight and very clear legends. For achieving certain standards in minting coins, well organised mints are necessary.

THE SYMBOLS AND LEGENDS ON COINS OF VIJAYANAGAR EMPIRE

The symbols and legends on coins are very useful for ascribing a coin to a particular dynasty or a particular king in whose period it was issued with some amount of certainty. A large number of Vijayanagar coins bear both the symbol and legend on them which facilitates the identification of the coins.

The Vijayanagar rulers have issued a number of types of coins with different symbols on the obverse.

HARIHARA I.

Two types of coins issued by Harihara I bear on the obverse the effigy of Garuda and Hanuman with the legend on the reverse.

HARIHARA II.

The region of Harihara II was an important period in the glorious chapter of Vijayanagar History. It was during his times many progressive measures were introduced.

Harihara II issued many types of coins with the figures of Hindu deities on them. The figures of Brahma, Vishnu and Siva were represented on his coins. Harihara II introduced the legend pratapa on coins instead of Vira which was the word used on the coins by his predecessors. The word Pratapa possibly sounds more majestic. It is possible that Harihara II was the first king to have issued Partaba Varahas or half Varahas (1).

Harihara II issued Uma Mahesvara, Lakshmi Narayana, Saraswathi Brahma types of coins.

Obverse - Siva and Parvati seated and both have kiritas on their heads. Siva has four arms, in one of the left hands he holds a trisula, and the other hand embracing the goddess. He holds a drum or damaru in one of the right hands while other hand is in Abhaya mudra or the gesture of protection. Sun and Moon are prominently shown.
