

GUIDE TO THE REFURBISHED AMARAVATI GALLERY

Dr.T.S. SRIDHAR, I.A.S.,
Principal Secretary
and
R. BALASUBRAMANIAN, M.A.,
Curator, Archaeology

Published by Commissioner of Musuems
Government Musuem, Chennai - 600 008.
2011

GUIDE TO THE REFURBISHED AMARAVATI GALLERY

Dr.T.S. SRIDHAR, I.A.S.,

Principal Secretary

and

R. BALASUBRAMANIAN, M.A.,

Curator, Archaeology

Published by

Commissioner of Museums

Government Museum, Chennai - 600 008.

2011

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL DATA

Title	: GUIDE TO THE REFURBISHED AMARAVATI GALLERY
Author	: Dr. T.S. Sridhar, I.A.S., & R. Balasubramanian, M.A.,
Copy Right	: The Principal Secretary / Commissioner of Museums, Government Museum, Chennai - 600 008.
Language	: English
Edition	: First
Publication No.	: New Series - General Section. 2011
Year	: 2011
Type Point	: 10
No.of Pages	: 57
No.of Copies	: 500
Paper used	: 100 Gsm
Printer	: Tirumullaivayal Printing Society Limited, Chennai - 1.
Publisher	: Department of Museums, Government Museum, Chennai - 600 008.
Web	: www.chennaiuseum.org
e-mail	: govtmuse@tn.gov.in
Price	: Rs.160.00

Dr.T.S.SRIDHAR, I.A.S.,
Principal Secretary /
Commissioner of Museums
Government Museum, Chennai - 600 008.

PREFACE

Government Museum, Chennai was established in the year 1851, with 1100 geological specimens. This Museum has now developed into a multipurpose museum with various sections like Archaeology, Numismatics, Anthropology, Botany, Zoology, Geology, Chemical Conservation and Children's Museum. It also includes Education, Design and Display and Chemical conservation and Research Laboratory as supporting sections. In order to preserve art, culture and natural heritage and to impart museum education throughout the state of Tamil Nadu, 20 district Museums have been established in districts. Collection, registration, preservation of objects, display, researches and publications are the major objectives of these museums.

There are ten galleries in the Archaeology section like- New Extension Gallery (stone Sculptures), Hero Stones, Inscriptions, Hindu Sculptures, Amaravati, Jain gallery, Saivite Bronzes, Vaishnavite, Jain and Buddhist bronzes, Metal-ware, Wood carvings etc.,

The World class limestone sculptures of Amaravati, Andhra Pradesh displayed in the Government Museum, Chennai since 1897, rank with the art of the great cultures of Egypt, Mesopotamia and were embedded on the walls of the Amaravati gallery. Most of the limestone sculptures were affected by salt action due to leakage and seepage in the walls of the gallery. In situ preservation has not yielded desired results. A central Government Team inspected the building of the Amaravati Gallery and gave a preliminary report to the Government. Based on the report an application was prepared and sent to Government of India, Ministry of Culture and obtained sanction of Rs.50 lakhs and Government of Tamil Nadu have given their share of Rs. 12.50 lakhs. A committee was constituted to monitor the progress of the work, consisting of The Commissioner of Museums as Chairman, Thiru R.Balasubramanian, Curator, Archaeology as Secretary, Dr.V.N.Srinivasa Desikan, Retired Asst. Director of Museums, Thiru. K.T.Narasimhan, Retired Superintending Archaeologist, Temple Survey, ASI, Dr. T.Satyamurti, Retired Superintending Archaeologist, Chennai Circle, ASI and Thiru. Narayanan, Assistant Executive Engineer, Department of Archaeology as members. The work was entrusted to PWD.

After getting the opinion of the Technical committee works were started in April 2009. All the listed sculptures were carefully removed from their original setting, new supports and brackets erected and systematically mounted on new showcases. Labels were prepared and kept in the showcases.

On obtaining funds from Government of India, the electrification works started and metal haloid lamps were used to light the gallery. Moreover the entire hall has been air-conditioned. I wish to place on record the efforts taken by Thiru R.Balasubramanian, Curator, Archaeology Section in compiling this guide book. I also wish to acknowledge with gratitude the support given by the technical committee in aesthetically rearranging the new gallery. My thanks are also due to Thiru.G.Ramesh, Photographer for providing pictorial assistance. I am sure the refurbished gallery will provide solace and satisfaction to all lovers of Buddhist art and will be a milestone in the annals of the Government Museum, Chennai. I hope this Guide book will help the students and researchers to understand and enrich their knowledge of the art of South India.

Chennai.
23-03-2011

T. S. Sridhar

DR.T.S.SRIDHAR

INTRODUCTION

Government Museum, Chennai was established in the year 1851, with 1100 geological specimens. This Museum has now developed into a multipurpose museum with various sections like Archaeology, Numismatics, Anthropology, Botany, Zoology, Geology, Chemical Conservation and Children's Museum. It also includes Education, Design and Display sections and Chemical conservation and Research Laboratory as supporting sections. In order to preserve art, cultural and natural heritage and to impart museum education throughout the state of Tamil Nadu, 20 district Museums have been established in districts. Collection, registration, preservation of objects, display, researches and publications are the major objectives of these museums.

There are ten galleries in the Archaeology section like- New Extension Gallery (stone Sculptures), Hero Stones, Inscriptions, Hindu Sculptures, Amaravati, Jain gallery, Saivite Bronzes, Vaishnavite, Jain and Buddhist bronzes, Metal-ware, Wood carvings etc.,

The famous Amaravati Stupa was discovered by Colonel Mackenzie about the year 1801. In 1830 some of the sculptured slabs were brought to Masulipatnam to beautify a pettah named after Robertson, the District Collector. During the course of his visit to this place in 1835, Sir Frederick Adam, Governor of Madras, saw the slabs and ordered that these should be sent to Madras to be preserved in the Museum of the Madras Literary Society. Dr. Balfour, soon after taking charge of the Madras Central Museum, began his efforts to get the slabs to Madras and the first batch arrived here in 1856 and, in 1859, most of them were sent to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India and lodged in the India Museum. Other batches of sculptures were secured during Bidie's time and they were set up in their present location in the Museum.

Buddhism was prevalent for several centuries as a very popular religion in South India, particularly in the Andhra area. The collection of Buddhist antiquities in the Government Museum, Chennai came from over a dozen sites, most of which are in the valley of the Krishna river, and of these Amaravati is the most important.

HISTORY OF AMARAVATI:

Amaravati occupies a preeminent position in the history of Indian Art. Beginning in 3rd Century BC the school of Amaravati Art unfolds its chapters through the sculptural wealth that once adorned the Mahachaitya, the monument of Buddhists situated in Amaravati with its history extending over a period of a millennium and a half.

ORIGIN OF CHAITYA:

The Mahasanghikas probably first settled in Amaravati with an initial memorial stupa or Chaitya for their worship. There are three categories of Chaityas : Dhatugarbha (Containing the relics of the Buddha), Paribojaka ( With one of the associated objects of the Buddha) and Uddesika, a memorial. The Mahachaitya in Amaravati was a Dhatugarbha containing the relic of the master from a subsequent period.

HISTORICAL:

As on date, Amaravati, locally known as 'Dipaldinne or 'Hill of Lamps', is a tiny town 35 km north of Guntur in Andhra Pradesh. Its antiquity dates back to the time when man was in a primitive stage of existence. Stone Age tools such as handaxes, cleavers, discoid and scrapers have been discovered in the region.

The recorded history of Amaravati begins from the time of Asoka, the famous Mauryan emperor who ruled from 272 to 235 B.C. The site has yielded a quartzite pillar bearing an inscription of Asoka. After the decline of the Mauryas, the later Satavahanas chose Dharanikota or Dhanyakataka near Amaravati as their capital. The Satavahanas were eventually replaced by the Ikshvaku rulers. At a much later date, the Pallava kings had their capital at Dharanikota before they migrated to Kanchipuram in Tamil Nadu.

CHAITYA AND ITS COMPONENTS:

The stupa at Amaravati is one of the biggest in South India. The ancient inscriptions refer to it as the Mahachaitya. It was originally mounted on a circular drum (medhi) of about 1.55 mts height and 49. 30 mts diameter, the dome or the hemispherical super structure (anda)

(42 mts. dia) crowned by a raifed harmika and chatras were raised to a height of its diameter. Four platforms (7.20X2.10 mts each) called "ayaka vedikas" projected out of the drum at the cardinal directions, a characteristic architectural feature of the Andhra stupas, each carrying five free standing ayaka pillars representing the five important events in the life of the Buddha viz., Birth, great renunciation, Enlightenment, First Sermon and Parinirvana. Built during the time of Asoka but was extensively enlarged and embellished by later rulers. The entire monument was covered with sculptured panels made of limestone or 'Palnad marble' found in the neighbourhood. The sculptures mostly portrayed scenes from Buddhist mythology. If religious monuments are any index of the popularity and influence of a religion, Buddhism at Amaravati must indeed have been immensely popular and influential.

Buddhism built a cultural bridge between Magadha and Southern India. The sculptures to which the visitor is introduced here tells the story of this culture in terms of art motifs and forms. Men of light and learning, inspirers of art came to the South from Asoka's capital, whose influence can be seen not only in the stupas and monasteries but also by percolation in the temples of later days of the Pallavas and Cholas. As our art of medieval and recent times is a modified version of that of the classical periods, the sculptures in the Buddhist gallery and in the adjoining Hindu gallery put up in direct touch with the history of artistic development for about two millennia. The Ganesa figure, so familiar to us in all our temples, is a derivative of the elephant eared long nosed gana figure of early Buddhist sculptures ; similarly our goddess, Sri Devi, from a minor folk deity seated on lotus; and the common representations of river goddesses have their precursors in primitive deities of the Buddhist folk pantheon.

Contacts with foreign lands are also indicated in the sculptures. Greek and Persian influence is involved in several of the decorative designs such as the leaf patterns and the heavy garlands on the coping stones of the railing. The very large Buddha from Kanchipuram and Tiruvalanchuli, which the visitor would not fail to see, is a pointer to the popularity, now forgotten, of Buddhism in the greatest of all ancient cities of Southern India, like Kanchi, Tiuvalanchuli, Cooum and Eraiyur.

Presently this gallery has been refurbished with the generous fund released by the Ministry of Culture, Government of India with a grant from Government of Tamil Nadu (2008-2010). Due to water seepage in the walls of the gallery and floor, the sculptures which were embedded above three feet in the gallery were affected by salt action. Hence as a safeguard measure, the sculptures which were embedded on the walls and lower level were removed carefully. Small fragments have been displayed in the wall cases, on wooden panels and they are no longer having direct contact with the wall. The sculptures are well preserved and displayed in glass fronted showcases above ground level so that viewers can enjoy the beauty and derive pleasure. The position of the railing has been changed and pleasing lights provided. The entire hall has been air-conditioned.

Of the total 299 objects in the possession of the Government Museum, Chennai, 130 sculptures are displayed in the gallery and the rest are kept in reserve display.

The jataka stories of the Buddha are selected and displayed in showcases. The railing part of the Stupa is done in the same fashion as it would have been at site .

The fragments are displayed in pleasing manner in wall cases. The plan of the refurbished gallery is printed for easy reference and visitors can follow and view the sculptures. An added attraction is an audio headphone facility with a running commentary.

Buddhism as an international faith of Indian origin is of interest to all enlightened persons. The literature on Buddhism is vast, but the Buddhist sculptures exhibited in the Museum gives the visitor a deeper insight into facts concerning the Buddha and his teachings than the best book can ever give. This Guide can only draw the attention to particular objects but the visitor has to seek for himself the inspiration which these sculptures were expected to give to the faithful who worshiped at the sacred spots to which the sculptures originally belonged. To others, they are full of meaning, artistically pleasing and historically revealing.

CATALOGUE

Devotee

The figure is over life – size. It is broken into two but now pieced together. The head and arms are broken. The remaining portions of hands are joined over the chest and are shown holding lotuses. The upper garment worn across the chest is elaborately worked, the waist band decorated with circular clasp and round ends. The necklace is shown with the large square clasps. The inscription on the lower garments means, "Gift of ... Gotami". It may be the life size image of a Satavahana King.

100 BC.

Acc.No. 213

CASING SLAB

CONTAINS PURNAGHATA

Acc.No. 183

STANDING BUDDHA

Hands and feet are broken but otherwise well preserved. The robe, with prominent folds, goes over the left shoulder. Small curls of hair are shown on the head. The nose, eyes, lips and urna (protuberance) on forehead are all clearly shown.

200-250AD.

Acc.No. 163.

LION

Placed at the Gateway of the Stupa as if to guard it. One side of the lion is flat.

150AD.

Acc.No. 92

CASING SLAB

It is fortunately very well preserved and shows a typical stupa flanked by dharmacakra pillars and with a frieze on top. The stupa is surrounded by a railing. Three of its gateway, are shown. The plinth, pillar, cross – bars, coping stones and guardian lions are shown clearly. A purnakalasa is shown on either side of the gateway. The drum, ayaka pillars and the casing slabs with sculptures are shown behind the rail. A harmika surmounts the dome with umbrellas at its two corners. Devas and dwarfish yakshas adore the stupa with the offerings in the tray. The dharmacakra pillars on either side stand behind empty throne suggestive of the Buddha. Above the wheels, the dwarf and devas play on musical instruments. The frieze at the top shows three scenes from the life of the Buddha. The scene on the right shows an empty throne surrounded by sleeping damsels, some leaning, against the musical instruments they play upon,, which suggests the departure of Siddhartha from his home at the dead of night. The central scene shows Bodhisattva seated on a throne and surrounded by Mara's daughters and hosts, one of whom on the left, raises his hand to strike the Bodhisattva. Mara stands with a club in his hand. The scene on the left shows the Buddha suggested by the empty throne Below the Bodhi tree, being adored by monks, laymen and women. Between the two middle pairs of knobs are naga couples. The inscription means, "(Adoration) to Siddhartha's! Gift of coping stone to the great stupa of the Lord by the wife of the merchant Samudra, the son of the householder Samgha, living in the chief city of Puki districts and by the .... Householder Kotachandi for welfare and happiness of the world". The musical instruments such as the harp and drum, the various attitudes of the sleeping women and the playful dwarfs below the seat of the Bodhisattava in the centre are interesting.

200-250 AD.      Acc.No. 221

LION

Placed at the gateway of the Stupa as if to guard it. Fully in the round.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 98

STANDING BUDHA

Defaced and weathered more massive but generally better than the above. This is "Superior to the later ones of Ajanta"

200 – 250 A.D

Acc.No.164

WALLCASE II

The Buddha standing while his robe covers his entire body except the right shoulder.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 38

Fragment containing the Buddha and his disciples.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 233

Fragment of pillar depicting the four Principle scenes from the life of the Buddha.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 255

Fragment containing the worship of the Buddha.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 118

Slab containing the outline drawing.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 121

Frieze containing two figures of the Buddha alternated by two Stupas.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 227

Fragment containing the worship of the Buddha.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 119

Fragment pillar prepresenting the story of Mara obstructing the feeding of the Pacceka Buddha (Khadirangara Jataka).

The sculpture represents the story of Mara obstructing the feeding of the Pacceka Buddha (Khadirangara Jataka). Once the Bodhisattva was born as a treasurer. A Pratyeka Buddha who had just risen from his seven days trance came to his house to get food. The Bodhisattava sent his men to get food for the guest.

Mara obstructed them knowing that the Pratyeka Buddha would die if he did not get food that day. But learning this from his men, the Bodhisattva set himself for the task and with firm resolve overcame Mara and was able to feed his guest. On the left the Bodhisattva is shown striding on a hooded serpent which represents the obstacles put in his way by Mara. The kneeling adorer is Mara after his defeat, there is another man with a staff on his shoulder with something wound round it. In the right panel the Bodhisattva is seen hurrying with his wife to feed the pacceka Buddha.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 288.

A MAN AND A BOY STANDING ON A BRICK PLATFORM.

It shows a man and a boy standing on a brick platform. The man wears a big turban and heavy ornaments. He carries a pear shaped purse in his left hand while his right hand is placed on the head of the boy. The boy also wears heavy ornaments and carries a bunch of lotus flowers in his left hand.

100 BC.

Acc.No. 181

Large sized casing slab showing a five hooded serpent.

It is broken into three pieces. Shows a five headed serpent. This is one of the originals of five headed coiled snakes on the casing slabs occurring in the miniature representations of the stupa. The bottom piece shows lotuses indicating a lake the home of the Naga.

100 AD.

Acc.No. 219

ANCESTRAL FORM OF LATER GANESA

Garlands are supported by dwarfs. One of them has a head like that of an elephant without the trunk. (this figure is probably the ancestor of the form of Ganesha of later days)

100 BC.

Acc.No. 77

SUBJUGATION OF NALAGIRI.

The sculpture represents the story of the taming of the fierce elephant, Nalagiri. The Buddha had a cousin called Devadatta who, impelled by sheer jealousy wanted to do away with the Buddha. Having failed in many attempts, Devadatta conspired with the palace mahouts and succeeded in letting loose the fierce elephant, Nalagiri, to attack the Buddha. But the fierceness of the animal vanished at the sight of the Buddha before whom it crouched in all humility. The sculpture shows on the left the elephant doing havoc in the street. The people on the balcony watch the scene below with sympathy. On the right, the animal is shown kneeling before the Buddha who is represented by the flaming pillar (now broken off). Behind the Buddha's symbol are his disciples. The umbrella and architectural features such as the gateway towers and balconies are noteworthy.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 14

EARLIEST REPRESENTATION OF SRI OR LAKSHMI

It shows a lady seated on the calyx of a lotus. She draws out a flower garland from a makara's mouth. On the left, a dwarf with three knots of hair on his head supports the garlands. There is a winged lion seated on its hind legs, on the plain end. The lady wears striped drawers. A star – shaped jewel is seen on her forehead, she is Sri or Lakshmi. (this figure is the earliest South Indian representation of the goddess)

100 BC.

Acc.No. 79

DESCENT OF BODHISATTVA AS A WHITE ELEPHANT TO BE BORNE BY MAYA

The story of the descent of the Bodhisattva as a white elephant to be born of Maya is depicted. The palanquin containing the elephant .i.e, the Bodhisattva is borne by dwarfs who are carrying it from the Tushita heaven. The Bodhisattva is followed and preceded by flying devas. Above, in the semi-circular panel, the Bodhi tree is worshipped by devas. The border at the top is composed of animals.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 159

BUDDHA PERFORMING MIRACLE AT SRAVASTI.

Garland borne by running yakshas. The worship of the dharmacakra is shown on the shield. Above this is the worship of the stupa.

150AD.

Acc.No. 76.

WALL CASE III

Fragment of a casing slab representing the Buddha's first sermon in the deer park.

It contains portions of two seated persons and of a recumbent deer. The entire piece represents the Buddha's First sermon in the Deer – Park.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 27

Fragment containing lotus design.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 117

Fragment showing a dwarf feeding a curious animal. Shows a dwarf feeding a curious animal with stag's horn and lion's face beside which is seated another similar animal whose face is lost.

100AD.

Acc.No. 258

Fragment containing the worship of the Buddha.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 119

Frieze showing two figures of the Buddha alternated by two stupas.

Shows two figures of the Buddha alternated with two stupas. The inscription means " ... the venerable Bu.... disciple of the venerable Nadhasire inhabitant of Mahangana and disciple of ... "

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 226

Fragment

150 AD.

Acc.No. 41

Fragment of a Casing Slab showing rail pattern with kudu enclosing a human head.

100 BC.

Acc.No. 84

Fragment of pillar showing parts of elephant, bull and two men.

100 BC.

Acc.No. 276

Fragment.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 40

Fragment.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 39

Fragment of a Casing Slab showing part of a pilaster on top of which are two recumbent winged lions placed back to back.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 26

FRIEZE SHOWING RAIL PATTERN AND THREE SCENES WITH INSCRIPTION

It has rail pattern and three scenes. On the right is the descent of the Bodhisattva at the centre is the stupa worship and on the left is the worship of the Dharmachakra. The inscription means, "Success! Gift of a slab at the northern gate by the young monk Vidhika, disciple of the reverend Naga, who resides at Kudura, and by his woman disciple Budharakhita and by her granddaughter Cula Budharakhita

200-250 AD. 29

Acc.No. 279

Monkey offering honey to the Buddha.

The border at the top shows lions and monkeys which represents the story of a monkey offering honey to the Buddha. When the Buddha was away from his disciples in a forest he rested under a sal tree and was attended by an elephant. Noticing this, a monkey made an offering of honey placed on a leaf to Buddha. He gladly ate a portion of honey. The monkey was overjoyed at this and climbed up a tree and jumped down from there, when it dies. But as a reward for its service to the Buddha it was born in heaven. In the border the empty throne under a tree suggests the Buddha towards which a monkey advances from the left with something in its hand. Again it is shown in the right climbing up the tree.

Below the half lotus are three panels over a broken circular panel both containing sculptures. they depict the story of Ajatasatru's visit to the Buddha . Of the three panels the one on the left shows six noblemen. The central panel shows king Ajatasatru seated on a throne with his queen in front, consulting his minister and Jivaka, his court physician, about his visit to the Buddha who was staying in the mango grove of Jivaka, The panel on the right shows elephants, horse and grooms. The broken panel below shows the empty throne at the centre suggesting the Buddha, whose disciples are seen behind. The turbaned man on the right is Ajatasatru and beside him are Jivaka and the minister. The inscription on top means , " Gift of a slab by Mala the woman disciple of the women teacher Samudiya the disciple of the worthy Punavasu learned in Vinaya (texts)

150AD.

Acc.No. 147

VIDHURAPANDITA JATAKA

The Sculpture represents the last scene of the story of vidhura, the wise one (Vidhurapandita Jataka). Vidhura was the minister of Dhanamjaya Kaurava, the king of Indraprastha. Having heard about Vidhura, Vimala, the queen of the Naga King, Sakka, longed to hear him preach the Dharma of the Law of good man. She pretended to be ill and told her husband that only Vidhura's heart would cure her. The king not catching her meaning was worried and did not know how he could satisfy her. Fortunately his daughter, Irandati came to his help. She proclaimed that she would marry the man who could bring Vidhura's heart. A young yaksha named Punnaka understood the task, went to Indraprastha and won Vidhura as a prize in a game of dice played between him and Dhanamjaya. While returning by air, he asked Vidhura to cling to his horse's tail, and also tried to kill him to get hold of his heart. Vidhura, by his preaching, converted him ultimately. Then Punnaka took him to Nagaloka on the horse's back, where he preached to the king and queen. The sculpture shows Vidhura seated on a throne in the centre and preaching the Dharma. The Naga King and his queen are listening to him, seated on the floor. The scene takes place in a pleasure garden as suggested by the lotus pond in the foreground. The scene above shows the serial journey of Punnaka, on his steed followed by dwarfs. Vidhura is shown clinging to the horse's tail. The foot rests the dress and ornaments of the Naga king and queen are noteworthy.

150AD.

Acc.No. 5

MARA IN COUNCIL

The sculpture in the broken circular panel depicts the scene of Mara in council with his sons. When the Bodhisattva sat under the Bodhi tree with the firm resolve to get enlightenment, Mara, the god of Evil in Buddhism, was perturbed and wanted to discomfit the Bodhisattva. He discussed his plan of attack with his four sons who, except one, agreed. They accordingly attacked the Bodhisattva but were vanquished. Mara then prostrated himself before the Buddha, accepting defeat. The court of Mara is shown in the sculpture. The three vertical panels below represent the story of the wicked king who chopped his infant son into bits. (Culladhammapala Jataka). King Mahapratapa of Benares had a son by name Dharmapala who was the Bodhisattva or the future Buddha. The queen, Chanda, was very fond of the child. Once when she was fondling her child she did not accord him the usual reception. He at once ordered the execution of the baby, who he thought, would become rival in future. The king's order was carried out despite the implorations of the queen. She also died on the spot unable to bear the ghastly sight. Here, the panel on the left shows the queen fainting at the approach of the messenger. The attendants try to protect the child. The central panel shows the king forcibly dragging the child. The next panel shows the king trampling upon the kind executioner who refused to kill the child, and another executioner with an axe.

150 AD.

Acc.No. 3

RAMAGRAMA STUPA

It shows a serpent guarded stupa depicting the story of the Ramagrama stupa. One of the eight portions of the Buddha's remains was brought to Ramagrama and a stupa was raised over it. The stupa was by the side of a lake which was the abode of a Naga who was really a deva cursed to be in the form of a snake for a time. He was worshipping the stupa in order to be liberated from his present state of existence which was the result of evil deeds of former days. When Asoka came to open this stupa for the redistribution of the relics the Naga objected to it and revealed his story to the king. Though Asoka had broken open the other seven original stupa he left this stupa alone untouched for fear of offending the Naga. The drum of the stupa is encircled by three five hooded serpents. The coils are beautifully knotted. Above the harmika is a cluster of umbrellas. There is a Naga couple on either side of the stupa, the Naginis Kneeling. One of the Nagarajas wears a sacred thread and udarabandha and holds a bunch of flowers from which a bee sucks honey. The Nagaraja should belong to a much later period than the other figure. Two Nagarajas fly above.

200-250 AD.

Acc.No. 182

COPING FRAGMENT

150 A.D

The sculpture depicts the story of Vidhura , the wise one (Vidhurapandita Jataka). On the extreme left of the sculpture, Vidhura is shown seated. Four noblemen are taking leave of him. They are Sakka, Garuda, the Naga king and Varuna, The scene at the top shows Irandati, the daughter of Sakka, talking to Punnaka on his horse. The next scene shows Punnaka speeding on his steed. The mountain, the crosses is the Black Mountain where he later attempts to kill Vidhura. In the next scene Punnaka hurries towards a gateway. King Korabba is seated with his queens and officials in the next scene, and Vidhura is taking leave of the king. The scene on the extreme right shows the yaksha's attendants flying. Then he is shown again to the left of the doorway suggesting his return journey. the next scene shows the yaksha holding Vidhura head downwards intending to hurl him down the hill which is shown behind. The scene besides its shows the yaksha and Vidhura on horses back in Nagaloka. The Naga king is shown standing and adoring the sage. The inscription above means, "Coping slab, as pious offering .... by Mahacatu, with his wife , sons and daughters."

Acc.No 123

COPING FRAGMENT

150 A.D

The story of Kavikumara (Kavikumaravadana) is represented here. King of Pancala had two wives. Lakshana and Sudharma. The son of Lakshana succeeded his father to the throne. But the astrologers told him that the son to be born to Sudharma would be fatal enemy to him, Therefore he made arrangements to kill the boy if one were to be born to her. Sudharma , who was pregnant, naturally sought protection from the minister and when she gave birth to a son, he was hidden and a girl was presented to the ruling king who thought no more of the prediction, On the other hand , Sudharma's son , Kavikumara as growing among fishermen in all splendour. This was reported to the king. He at once sent men on horse to pursue and kills the boy. The boy escaped the danger with the magic jewel given by his mother and finally with the art of magic deceived the king and killed him. At the top left corner of the sculpture are some men on horses. They are again seen, in the centre of the panel, in great haste. The scene at the lower left corner shows a washer man with his bundle of clothes, which contains the prince. On the right the prince is running hurriedly having been released from the bundle. At the top right corner are shown some men around a corpse. This is another trick by which the prince escapes from the soldiers. The wagon-roofed butts are noteworthy. The inscription at the top means , " ... of the superintendent of the water house of the king Sri Sivamaka Sada."

Acc.No. 124

BASE PORTION OF PILLAR

Half lotus over, a border of makaras and lions

150 AD

Acc.No. 126

CROSS BAR

Contains lotus designs

150 AD

Acc.No. 127

CROSS BAR

Contains lotus designs

150 AD

Acc.No. 128

CROSS BAR

Contains lotus designs

150 AD

Acc.No. 129

PILLAR STORY OF THE BUDDHA PERFORMING A MIRACLE

150 AD

The Sculpture depicts the story of the Buddha performing a miracle. The central circular panel (partly defaced) shows the mango tree with an empty throne and flaming pillar surmounted by a trisula beneath it suggesting the Buddha's presence. Devotees including princesses surrounded the throne. In the panel above the Buddha is in the air with flames issuing from his body and water from his feet. The Buddha is bedecked with jewels and is in the garb of a god. Devotees adore him on all sides. In the lower three panels. A nagaraja a garuda and two great gods with umbrella above them are proceeding together. The dancing gandharavas and dwarf yaksha over a border which is composed of central foliage pattern, terminal makaras and running lion and griffin.

Acc.No. 130

CROSS BAR

Contains lotus designs

150 AD

Acc.No. 131

CROSS BAR

Story of the translocation of the begging bowl of the Buddha to the heaven 150 AD

The sculpture depicts the story of the translocation of the bowl of the Buddha to heaven (Plate V). A number of gods and goddesses are shown clustering round a bowl in a tray carried aloft and adored with great reverence. Nagas, garudas and rakshas dance and divine damsels soar above with hands joined in adoration. Acc.No.132

CROSS BAR

Contains lotus designs

150 AD

Acc.No. 133

COPING FRAGMENT SOME SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF THE BUDDHA

Some scenes from the life of the Buddha are represented in the sculpture. When the Buddha visited Kapilavastu for the first time after his enlightenment, he stayed in a grove, Suddhodana sent ten courtiers, one after the other to ask the Buddha to come to the palace. Only the tenth courtier succeeded in bringing the Buddha to the palace while the others got converted. At the palace the Buddha was saluted first by youngsters and later on by the older men. In the sculptures, the most important panel is at the centre. It shows the empty throne, suggesting the Buddha, surrounded by Suddhodana and his people. The flying figures are the devas shown here to suggest the superhuman powers of the Buddha. On knowing this fact only the elderly Sakyas bowed to the Buddha. The extreme left panel shows a storeyed mansion. King Suddidhana is shown in the lower compartments despatching messengers to bring the Buddha. In the left compartment, above is shown Yasodhara attended by a woman and in the right compartment, she is again shown with a man, a messenger from her father sent to persuade her to come home. The next panel shows again Yasodhara seated on a wicker seat and surrounded by women who are engaged in a musical concert while another woman is coming through a gateway with a dish of food in her hand. Yet Yasodhara is in a pensive mood. The lower scene to the extreme right shows the birth of Rahula preceded by the scene of the renunciation of Siddhartha, suggested by the horse coming out of a gateway. Above the top right corner shows the Buddha, suggested by the throne, preaching to his first five disciples. The two – storeyed pavilion, the wicker seat and flute are interesting.

150 AD

Acc.No. 134

FRAGMENT OF PILLAR STORY OF MANDHATA, THE UNIVERSAL MONARCH

The sculpture depicts the story of Mandhata, the universal monarch. Through his merits Mandhata, a king of ancient India, got the seven "jewels" of an emperor, and he ruled over all the world. But he desired to enjoy the pleasures of heaven. When he proceeded to go to heaven he was obstructed by the rishis and the Nagas who were subdued by Mandhata but were released on the Queen's intervention. Then, on reaching Sudharsana, the city of the gods, Mandhata was offered a half of Sakka's throne. After a long period he desired to usurp Sakka's throne which made him fall to the earth. Finally from his death – bed he conveyed to the world his message that avariciousness should be shun. The lower left compartment of the sculptures shows Mandhata seated on a throne surrounded by his courtiers. The next panel shows him with the seven "Jewels" namely, the minister, queen, prince, elephant, the horse, the gem and the wheel. The next panel on the right shows him trampling over a serpent king and defying a number of rishis. The circular panel above shows him enjoying the pleasures of heavenly tree. At the top he is shown sharing Sakka's throne. The rishis and the highly ornamentated pillars of the gateway are noteworthy.

150AD

Acc.No. 135

BASE PORTION OF ORNER PILLAR

Worship of the throne

150AD

Acc.No. 146

TOP PORTION OF PILLAR MONKEY OFFERING HONEY TO THE BUDDHA

The border at the top shows lions and monkeys which represents the story of a monkey offering honey to the Buddha. When the Buddha was away from his disciples in a forest he rested under a sal tree and was attended by an elephant. Noticing this, a monkey made an offering of honey placed on a leaf to Buddha. He gladly ate a portion of honey. The monkey was overjoyed at this and climbed up a tree and jumped down from there, when it dies. But as a reward for its service to the Buddha it was born in heaven. In the border the empty throne under a tree suggests the Buddha towards which a monkey advances from the left with something in its hand. Again it is shown in the right climbing up the tree. Below the half lotus are three panels over a broken circular panel both containing sculptures. they depict the story of Ajatasatru's visit to the Buddha . Of the three panels the one on the left shows six noblemen. The central panel shows king Ajatasatru seated on a throne with his queen in front, consulting his minister and Jivaka, his court physician, about his visit to the Buddha who was staying in the mango grove of Jivaka, The panel on the right shows elephants, horse and grooms. The broken panel below shows the empty throne at the centre suggesting the Buddha, whose disciples are seen behind. The turbaned man on the right is Ajatasatru and beside him are Jivaka and the minister. The inscription on top means , " Gift of a slab by Mala the woman disciple of the women teacher Samudiya the disciple of the worthy Punavasu learned in Vinaya (texts)

150AD

Acc.No. 147

CROSSBAR

150 AD

SOUMANASA JATAKA

The sculpture depicts the story of Soumanasa (Soumanasa Jataka). Tenu, The King of the Kurus once honoured the ascetic Maharakshita. Sometime later a follower of Maharakshita came and told the king as his own of a prophecy of maharakshita , that the king would soon have a son. The king was glad to hear the news and rewarded this sham ascetic. The king had a son, who was no other than the Bodhisattva. When the prince was only seven years old, the king of the ascetic during his absence. But the prince discovered the shallowness of the ascetic and therefore did not respect him. When the king returned this was reported to him by the ascetic. The king got angry and ordered the killing of his son. But the prince personally convinced his father about the shallowness of the ascetic and went away from the country. The king could not stop him from renouncing the world and repented much for his action. At the centre of the panel king Renu with his wife is shown honouring Maharakshita. The Scene on the top right shows the sham ascetic with curly hair busy with hatchet. The Scene to its right shows king's servants with sword in hand trying to attack the prince plying on a couch.

Acc.No. 148

CROSSBAR

150 AD.

The sculpture represents the story of the noble elephant chadanta (Chhadanta Jataka). Once the Bodhisattva was born as an elephant king with six tusks. He had two wives one of whom mistaking that her lord was partial to the other wished to be born as the queen of the king of Benares to wreak vengeance on her lord. She accordingly worshipped a Pratyeka Buddha and having starved to death was re-born as she desired. Now remembering the resolve of her former birth she sent a hunter to procure the six tusks of the noble elephant thus to cause his death, the hunter on reaching the camp of the elephant hit him but he did not yield. So the hunter requested him to part with his tusks. The elephant consented and helped the hunter in sawing the tusks, but finally died unable to bear the pain. The hunter returned with the tusks to the queen and related to her the story of how the elephant died on hearing of the nobility and the death of her former husband the queen also died of grief. In the sculpture the lower scene depicts the sporting of the elephants in lotus pond. The wild forest is suggested by the deer on the right and a boar in the centre. On the right above the pond the royal elephant with a parasol held above him by another elephant goes to the lake with his retinue. At the top right corner is shown the elephant and below it in a pit is shown the hunter. In front of this scene, besides the tree, the elephant kneels and helps the hunter to saw its tusks. The top scene shows the hunter carrying the tusks tied to the end of a pole. The lions on the left also suggest the forest and below them is shown the dying elephant.

Acc.No. 149

CROSS BAR SHOWS THE STUPA WORSHIP

Shows the stupa worship. The stupa is surmounted by a number of umbrellas. On its right are five men the two in the front row beating a drum and the two in the centre playing on flute. On the left are six women and two men some in the attitude of adoration and others with offerings. A man and a woman are kneeling in front of the stupa.

DAD

Acc.No. 150

LOWER PART OF PILLAR STORY OF UDAYANA AND HIS QUEENS

The sculpture depicts the story of and to Udayana and his queens. The broken circular panel shows an agitated scene where women are lying down.

Below, the panel on the left shows the queen Magandiya on a seat discussing The plot with her uncle, The fat man beside her. The central panel shows king Udayana rushing violently disregarding Magandiya who kneels and requests him not to go to queen Samavati's house. This is the scene in queen Magandiya's palace, just after she had put in a snake into the king's vina. The panel on the right shows three women, watching.

150AD

Acc.No. 151

COPING FRAGMENT UNIDENTIFIED SCULPTURE

Unidentified sculpture. At the top left corner is shown a king in his palace in the company of his queen, attended by a woman. Below, an elephant is kneeling. In the centre an elephant with a rider comes out of a city gateway and a horseman running before the horse. On the right, a man is coming out of a gateway. Behind him is another man holding an umbrella.

150AD

Acc.No. 154

CROSS BAR (BROKEN) SOME SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF THE BUDDHA

The sculpture on the border shows some scenes from the Buddha's life. The panel at the top shows the devas carrying the Buddha's turban and locks. The panel on the right shows the horse, Kanthaks proceeding out of Kapilavastu, and the Bodhisattva's presence on the horse is suggested by the umbrella as well as by the dwarfs supporting the hoofs of the horse. The panel lower down shoes some women of rank adoring the Buddha represented by the Bodhi tree and the empty throne trisula.

150AD

Acc.No. 155

FRAGMENT OF PILLAR

150AD

The sculpture depicts the story of the Peacock preaching the Dharma (Mora Jataka). When Brhamadatta was king of Benares, the Bodhisattva was born as a golden peacock. It could not be caught as it had a charm which protected it from snares. Khema, the wife of Brahmadatta, having dreamt that the peacock preached the Dharma wanted to hear it. As nobody was able to catch the bird, she died her desire unfulfilled. After six successive kings had failed in their attempt to catch the bird, the seventh accomplished the work with the help of a hunter who by the employment of a peahen ensnared the peacock and brought it to the king. Then it preached the Dharma to the king and the queen. The broken circular panel at the top shows the king seated on a throne near a lotus pond, with his queens. The woman on throne is Khema who wants to hear the peacock. Of the three panels below the one on the left has some mutilated figures. The panel on the right shows the king seated on a throne with this knee raised and kept in that position by means of a patta. He is minister is near him seated on a wicker set. The hunter is kneeling before the king. The central panel shows the king and the queen seated on a throne with hands in anjali pose listening to the peacock shown in front of them with its plume shown as a halo round its body. Above the peacock is the hunter who has now become a monk.

Acc.No. 158

TOP PORTION OF PILLAR STORY OF THE DESCENT OF THE BODHISATTVA AS A WHITE ELEPHANT TO BE BORNE BY MAYA

The story of the descent of the Bodhisattva as a white elephant to be born of Maya is depicted. The palanquin containing the elephant .i.e, the Bodhisattva is borne by dwarfs who are carrying it from the Tushita heaven. The Bodhisattva is followed and preceded by flying devas. Above, in the semi-circular panel, the Bodhi tree is worshipped by devas. The border at the top is composed of animals.

150AD

Acc.No. 159

CASING SLAB WITH PURNAGHATA

100 A.D

ACC.NO. 190

PART OF OLD RAILING

100 AD

The pillars and cross bars are in simple style. This may have been a portion of the harmika railing on the summit of the stupa

ACC.NO.180

COPING FRAGMENT

150AD.

The sculpture is unidentified. Note, the gateway, the ceremonial umbrella and mahout lying on his animal's head.

ACC.NO.6

SAKKAGAINING A NYMPH (ROHINI KHATTIVAKANNA)

150 AD

The sculpture depicts the story of sakka gaining a nymph (Rohini Khattivakanna). Once a lovely nymph was born in the heavens. Four gods quarrelled to possess her. Finally they went to Sakka to settle their dispute. Sakka desiring to get her himself, told the gods that he would die without her. Then the gods departed after presenting her to Sakka. In the sculpture on the left, the four gods and the nymph are shown. The next scene shows one of the gods pulling at her. The next scene shows another carrying her. The scene on the right shows two of them imploring the rest to go to Sakka, The scene above shows again these four gods under the balcony of a mansion. In the balcony are seated Sakka and the woman in anjali pose. The gods are shown without their usual turbans to indicate that they behave like ordinary folk in the affair.

ACC.NO. 56

COPING FRAGMENT

150 AD

Unidentified sculpture on the left grooms and other are seated near an arched gateway, holding a discussion. Beside them are horses and an elephant. The mahout lies idly on his animal. On the right turbaned men are advancing with hands joined in adoration. An attendant (obliterated) holds an umbrella. The trees in the background suggest a garden.

ACC.NO. 57

COPING FRAGMENT

150 AD.

Garlands borne by two yakshas. Interspaces are filled by representations of the worship of the stupa and of the throne with dharmacakra behind.

ACC.NO.72

SLAB (BROKEN)

100 AD.

Shows a king with his two consorts standing on a rail pattern

ACC.NO.209

KAVIKUMARA JATAKA

150 AD.

The story of Kavikumara (Kavikumaravadana) is represented here. King of Pancala had two wives. Lakshana and Sudharma. The son of Lakshana succeeded his father to the throne. But the astrologers told him that the son to be born to Sudharma would be fatal enemy to him, Therefore he made arrangements to kill the boy if one were to be born to her. Sudharma, who was pregnant, naturally sought protection from the minister and when she gave birth to a son, he was hidden and a girl was presented to the ruling king who thought no more of the prediction, On the other hand, Sudharma's son, Kavikumara as growing among fishermen in all splendour. This was reported to the king. He at once sent men on horse to trace out and kill the boy. However the boy escaped the danger with the magic jewel given by his mother and finally with the art of magic deceived the king and killed him. At the top left corner of the sculpture are some men on horses. They are again seen, in the centre of the panel, in great haste. The scene at the lower left corner shows a washer man with his bundle of clothes, which contains the prince. On the right the prince is running hurriedly having been released from the bundle. At the top right corner are shown some men around a corpse. This is another trick by which the prince escapes from the soldiers. The wagon-roofed butts are noteworthy. The inscription at the top means , " ... of the superintendent of the water house of the king Sri Sivamaka Sada."

ACC.NO. 124

COPING FRAGMENT

150 AD.

Two yakshas thrust a flower garland into the mouth of a huge dwarf. Another yaksha pulls at the dwarfs turban behind. The bight shows three elephants supporting a tray containing a purnaghata or "Full – vase"

ACC.NO. 75

SLAB

100 BC.

Shows the feet of the Buddha with wheel mark in the centre, srivatsa flanked by svastikas on the heels, trisulas on wheel and srivatsa on toes. Two standing devotees are on either side

ACC.NO. 169

Fragment shows a pillar top with figures of lions placed back to back

100 AD

ACC.NO. 277

Fragment containing the Buddha and stupa

100 AD

Acc.No. 280

FRAGMENT OF A FRIEZE: A SCENE FROM THE LIFE OF THE BUDDHA

200- 250 AD

On the right, Gautama divests himself of all princely ornaments. The Gods are carrying his headdress to their kingdom. The next panel shows a mithuna. The third one shows Sujata feeding the Bodhisattva. The next panel shows another mithuna. The panel on the left shows Mara vainly taunting the Bodhisattva who is serene. Mother Earth, shown below his seat, responds to his call and is a witness to Gautama's qualifications to become a Buddha. The bullocks and the cart in the third panel are interesting.

Acc. No. 114

FRAGMENT CONTAINING FLYING DEVAS CARRY THE HEAD DRESS OF SIDDHARTHA

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 43

A seated figure wearing karandamakuta in the attitude of explaining.

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 29

Dwarf dancing with left leg raised and right hand lifted

100 AD

Acc.No. 216

Dancing in ecstasy with the left leg completely folded up

100 AD

Acc.No. 220

Fragment of a Casing slab Showing a pillar

100 AD

Acc.No. 217

PART OF A FRIEZE DEPICTING THE STORY OF MAYA'S DREAM AND ITS INTERPRETATION

200-250 AD

The panel (broken) on the left shows Maya reclining and the Bodhisattva in the form of a white elephant descending from the Tushita heaven to enter her womb. The figure at her feet is a god who guarded her during the period of her pregnancy. The Central panel shows the King in the court discussing with his counsellors. The panel on the right shows a Mithuna. Acc.No. 60

Fragment of a Pillar depicting the Story of the snake charmer and his monkey (Ahigundika Jataka)

50AD

Acc.No. 113

Fragment of a casing slab showing the portions of a building

100 AD

Acc.No. 250

Fragment showing a building with railing and horse shoe shaped windows

100 AD

Acc.No. 259

Fragment showing a Dryad standing beneath a tree within a kudu and adorning herself with jewels.

200- 250 AD

Acc.No. 106

Fragment depicting the Story of Vessantara, the gracious prince (Vessantara Jataka)

200- 250 AD

Acc.No. 115

Fragment showing the Scenes from the life of the Buddha

200- 250 AD

Acc.No. 105

Fragment showing Three nimbate Buddhas under the Bodhi tree each attended by a man.

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 262

Fragment shows five Buddhas and five stupas

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 264

A stupa within an enclosure is shown. Women are entering through the arched gateways.

200- 250 AD

Acc.No. 46

Fragment showing mutilated figures

150 AD

Acc.No. 289

Fragment of Dharmachakra pillar

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 237

Fragment of casing slab shows a man, woman and flying deva

100 AD

Acc.No. 254

Frieze depicts the story of the conversion of Nanda

150 AD

Acc.No. 285

Fragment of casing slab showing story of the Ramagrama stupa

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 243

Stupa slab showing Worship of the Buddha

200- 250 AD

Acc.No. 225

The partly erased figure of the Buddha carved in a niche is shown standing on a full blown lotus

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 24

Fragment contains foliage and geese on lotus

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 218

Fragment of pillar depicts the four principle scenes from the life of the Buddha

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 255

Frieze contains three Buddhas and three stupas

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 236

Fragment shows worn out figures of lion, bull and man

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 20

Fragment contains stupas and lotuses

200 – 250 AD

Acc.No. 265

Part of a cluster of umbrellas is all that remains

100AD

Acc.No. 74

Fragment contains human figures

100 BC

Acc.No. 83

Fragment shows the top portion of a pilaster with spirited figures of lion and bull

150 AD

Acc.No. 42

Fragment shows a haloed Buddha a flying Deva and a chauri bearer

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 23

Fragment shows Scenes from the life of the Buddha such as the renunciation , the first sermon and the worship of the Buddha

200-250 AD

Acc.No. 222

Fragment shows Standing Buddha with a man on either side

200- 250 AD

Acc.No. 120

FRAGMENT STORY OF THE CONVERSION OF NANDA

200-250 AD

The lowest panel shows Nanda and his wife attended by a woman. The Buddha is seen entering the gateway. Nanda, now seen near the Buddha, hold his bowl. The next panel at the top shows the Buddha seated on a throne preaching to his followers while Nanda is grieving for his lost wife. The top panel (broken) shows Sakka seated with his wife on a throne surrounded by the nymphs whom the Buddha shows to Nanda.

Acc.No. 244

Fragment of Casing Slab shows Border of running animals and trisulas

100 AD

Acc.No. 260

FRAGMENT (MAHABHINISHKRAMANA)

100 AD

The arched gateway in the sculpture indicated Kapilavatsu. The horse, Kanthaka comes out of the gateway. An umbrella is held over it by a man, suggesting the presence of the prince. The groom and the charioteer, Channa, are running in front of the horse. Above them are the devas who opened the gateway. There is a rail pattern below.

STONE OBJECTS

BHATTIPROLU

Bhattiprolu is a village in the Repelle taluk of the Guntur district about 24 miles west by south from Masulipatnam. There was a stupa here of solid brick. "It was one of the earliest stupas where the slabs encasing the projections at the four cardinal points alone were sculptured. A number of interesting articles were found in the stupa area during the excavation conducted by A. Rea of the Archaeological Survey of India in 1892. They include three inscribed votive caskets each containing a stone and a crystal reliquary with relics and jewels. Of these, the relics have been given away to the Maha Bodhi Society of Calcutta; the jewels consisting of flowers made of thin sheets of pure gold, and beads of gold, crystal and of semi-precious stones are kept in the reserve collection. The large stone caskets are shown in the following order while the smaller crystal and stone reliquaries are shown in the small case fixed to the wall. The caskets and a crystal bead are inscribed in Brahmi characters which differ from those of Asokan edicts. The inscriptions mention the relics of the Buddha. From the form of the scripts, the finds are dated to about the time of Asoka. (Of. Epigraphia Indica, Vol.II. pp.323-329.)

1. Casket number one – It consists of two parts, the lid and the lower part. The inscriptions on the rim of the lower part mean that the casket had been prepared and given along with a crystal casket to contain some relics of the Buddha by Kura, the son of Banava; and Utare the youngest son of Pigaha.
2. Casket number two – It consists of two parts, the lid and the lower part. Of the inscriptions on the lid, that on the central disc consists of 18 lines of which 11 are written lengthwise, 2 Breadthwise on the left and 5 breadthwise on the right. This inscription means that the committee (consists of) Hiranavagha, Vugalaka and others. The inscription on the rim to the left and below the central disc mentions the relics of the Buddha. The inscriptions on the rim, to the right of the inscription on the central disc, read "Kuba, the acetic of the Committee," and "Buba, the son of Chaghana Utara. ...."

3. Casket number three – It also consists of two parts, the lid and the lower part. The inscription on the rim of the lower part of the casket means, "By the Committee of the venerable Arahadina (was given a casket and a box. The work (is) by him, by whom King kubiraka, caused the carving to be done".

The inscription on the lid means that the members of the guild are Vachha, Chagha and others.

4. Hexagonal crystal piece – The piece was found inside one of the caskets and is now kept in the reserve collection. It is also inscribed; the inscription means, ".....gift by the women from Nandapura and by the Sramaneras from Suvanamaha, in the Ayasakasathi gohi of Gilanakera."

BUDDHA ERAIYUR
12TH CENTURY A.D

In this seated figure the protuberance on the head is shown as a tongue of flame which is a late feature

BUDDHA KUVAM
13TH CENTURY A.D

The features of this seated figure are of the late medieval period. This shows that Buddhism continued to exist here for long.

STANDING BUDDHA - KANCHIPURAM
5TH CENTURY A.D

This more than life size figure of the Buddha of Kanchipuram bears testimony to the wide prevalence of Buddhism in this city. The boldness of conception and the wonderful depiction of the figure is in the characteristic style of the South Indian School of sculpture.

